MakZM318	Composition 1	The aim of the course is to learn how to stylize a human figure in drawing and adapt it to ceramic materials. Depending on a student's individual interest, the figural composition can be rendered in any style and technique in accordance with the chosen ceramic material.	Jevgeņija Loginova	6
MakZM320	Composition 2	"The concept of clay" The aim of the course is to gain an understanding of clay and ceramics as art media in the most versatile and broad sense. Within the framework of the course, students develop a project of a conceptual artwork, which is based on one or more possible aspects of ceramics. The student project should include a search for a new perspective on the perception of ceramics as an art medium in different contexts- (geology, archaeology, cultural history, ceramic design, art, latest industrial technologies, etc.). At the final show, the student must present a ceramic artwork project that includes a description of the concept and material samples that describe the visual and technical qualities of the work. The art project is planned to be fully implemented during the summer study cycle.	Dainis Pundurs	6
MakZM309	Ceramics Technology	Saggarr firing. Soda firing in the boura box kiln.	Dainis Lesiņš	3
MakZM333	3D Modeling	Working with 3D computer software Autodesk Maya. Exploring the interface and the tools, experimenting with options. Creating 3D models. Preparing them for digital	Gita Straustiņa	3 printing with a 3D printer that uses ceramic mass.

MakZM322	Porcelain Painting	Students apply their knowledge of composition practically for porcelain decoration. Porcelain painting traditions, techniques. Student assignment— painting on a ready-made porcelain surface.	Jevgeņija Loginova	3
MakZM329	Specialty Studies	The aim of the "Specialty Studies" program is to prepare and organize a ceramics event (such as a symposium or workshop). Theoretically, the student gets acquainted with the available samples of experience in this field, shares his / her experience, analyzes the situation. Practically learns to work in a group, present one's idea, respect the opinion of colleagues, analyze, come to a common solution and develop their part of the project within the overall concept. Only a project is being developed this semester. (The event is implemented next semester). Erasmus students can plan an individual event according to the situation in their school.	Jevgeņija Loginova	3
